(Copyright, 1988, by the McClure Newsp per Syndicate.)

By JANE OGBORN

Designing hats for a popular-price whotesale millinery establishment woa not Upton Prend's ideal of a stalwart, life-sized men's occupation. Silit even young men with that innate feeling. for lipe and cotor that marks them-or brunds them—as artists before they have had a fair chance to determine for themselves whether they wish to follow an artist's career or not, heve to eat and have to be clothed, and dealgning, women's hats seemed at the time to be the only opportunity that afforded what Pread considered a liv-ing wase. Getting an occasional order for a portratt perhaps was more the e portratt perhaps was more the sort of thing he had dreamed of, and more the sort of thing his friends ex-pected, but it would not have provided for him a comfortable existence at the Stanley Arms, and Upton Preed found that living at that well-appointed little hotel had advantages that offset the designing of bets designing of shots.

Bill Upton did not like to have people know the nature of hig "artistic" work. In the morning after breakfest he got out his drawing board and, shut up in his sang sittle chints group, he would call into being first the image of heads of feir women, and then, as if hy magic, he would summon hote to crown them. Hastily end with quick stroke of his pencil he would skeich the pretty heads and then, with minuteness that made reproduction hy a milliner possible, he would portray the hat. Having made some four or five akotches he would roll them up securesketches he would roll them up secure-ly in his portfolto and, after heving had lunchesn tu the hotel dining room, he would sally forth to the millinery catchitehment, there to deliver his catchlishment, there to deliver his worse. They were not always acceptod. In fact, he was expected only to deliver two designs a day and he made sometimes as many as elz. After his visit to the milliner's he had a good part of the afternoon free—not entirely free, either, for if he stected to one of one of the furthership leaders go te one of the fashtonable indoor te one or the tantonatic indoor ice rinks he always hed before him the teak of studying the women'e bais, not so much to "get ideas" for designe but to tearn—what to him was the hardest tesson—what women thought was becoming. Upton had ideas of his own shout heasts in women's consent. own about beauty in women's apparel, and often when he made a design that he thought wee his mesterplece it was onty to have the manager of the milli-nery entahlishment push the design aside, declaring that if he put out hats like that his business would be ruined. So Upton westd carry back the rejected drawings and crush them into his waste hasket and start afresh the next merning with on effort to surpass his own notions about hats.

Upton atways worked in secrecy. You see he was not proad of his call-ing. If the substantiat, atow-moving chambermald happened still to be set-ting his room to rights when he re-turned from breakfast, he was loath to get out his drawing things, but lisgered over his morning paper or welked idly about his room. One day after she had left the room and he had begun in earnest, there was a knock at his door end, without watting for Up-ton to call out "come," the chembergood te throw ewsy."

"Oh, those," Upton setd as the woman held up a crushed and crumpled girl's head wearing what the day before he had judged one of his best designs only to have it condomned oo impossible by the practical militeery manager, "those are rubbish. I just do them—to amuse myself, as it were." And the chambermaid withdrew, dragging her mop and carpet sweeper after

The hat in question was inspired by a mussel shell. Upton had seen hate that were inspired by rance and sweet pens and even by canery birds. That nort of thing was trite. He happened to have a few shells that he had gathered on the sea shore the summer fore and treasured for no very good reason, and it occurred to him one day that in the graceful curves of the musset shell and in its deep, panetrating black with brown, green and blue shadings, he might devise a hat that would be worth designing. The head he draw for this design was the head of a sea nymph. Ite elwaye made the facec first to sailt the hats—if the hat show-ed Japanene influence the girl was slightly slost-eyed, if the wore a sombrero she was of Spanish features. The hat was of bleck sitk above with The hat was of block alth above with shadings of brown and blue and the lining beneath the hrim was of the shimmering gray of the inside of a mussel shell. Upten restly reveled in this hat—only to have it rejected the next day at headquarters, while on insipid tittle hat of dark blue straw with a cherry datating at one side was pronounced a "witner."

Upton had not learned his lesson.
In another during mood he designed a hat that he pair was largified by a German air raid at night, though the militnery manager did not even attempt to see the similarity. Its did admit, however, that the design was original and might do for a sheatrical costume, but for his purposes—never. And that was consigned to the waste backet, where a faw days before had other day a hat that had been auggested by the colors and shape of a pring onlon. Upton had had them for ner the night before and had actaally carried one to his room, put it to water and taken his design from life. That etso wee among the fallures.

Upton knew that onlon hat of hts was original. Still some one cise must have designed it simultaneously. For week later as Upton ant at dinner he looked up and there two tables off the very pretty golden-brown blonds who dined alone end seemed to have few friends-Upton had seen ber often and not infrequently recatled her face and cotoring when aummonting up tmaginary models in his room—there, sat the little blonds wearing the enten hal. Yes, it was eacily like the hat he hed designed, with the colors as given in his sketch reproduced exactly. An ex-pert milliner could not have reproinced the sketch more faithfully, end the little blende wee just the model fer that het. Upton was in a faver of exritement. He wanted to tell ble friends of the coincidence, but to do so would have necessitated talling of his own role on a hat designer.

Then—and this was really too much for Upton's peace of mind—the little blonde appeared one tempestnous spring might when the rule west pouring outside and the wind could be heard rushing around the window passes—she appeared in the het that he had designed when thinking of an afripione rated at anyth, and in the afrpione "raid" at "night, and in the eyee that seemed all tenderment and midness ander the spring onton hat there was now a heanting look of distress and sorrow. But it was 'simulatakebly Upton's hot. Then appeared the real masterpiece—the musselshell hat, and this seemed to suit the ittile blenders fines better even than the others. It was a mervelous hat and it was worn by a wonderfut model. Upton noticed the eyes of other diners focussed on it and he realised then his nuccess in designing it, though he ruccess in designing it, though he could not guess how the hat had been made. There was nothing at all striking in the cut or cotoring of the hat in the asual occeptonce of the word. That it altracted attention was, Upton know, simply because it was distincaliks. The little bloude face haunted htm and the mititnery manager asked htm to try and very the type of hats he designed. They were att mede for the same type of face. Upton began to lose steep. It was not so much the mystery of the matter, though it was odd enough to have another person ex-tract ideas from your mind in this way and bring into realization so success-fully your thwarted dreams. The thing was that Union was very much in love was that Upton was very mach in love with the little blonde and that the little blonde was not absolutely indifferent as to his existence he might have issued to his own satisfaction

Finelly efter she hed been wearing the three hate for three weeks he could stend the suspense no longer, and he bravely followed her out of the dining room one night, end with the manner of an old friend bade her a good evening. Not being reputed, he sat totking with her in the hotel re-son and even before he sought to solve the mystery be told her that he was more interested in her than he had ever been in any girl before, and she, eweet, frank child thet she wes, told him that she was very glad of that, for maid stack her head in the door. She held a waste banket in her hend. "You don't make a misteke, sir, do you, end throw eway picters you want?" she shed. "Some of these here pretty the head. These agents based to be total her that he had designed them. he told her that he had she tarned very scarlet and said she didn't know that it was from his room the chembermaid had got them. She seld she had come to the city to study ever displayed was that of making her own bats. So she had come and had she discovered that to begin with the pupils had to draw their own designs of hate and she simply could not draw. The Government desires to impress upon all patriotic Americans that it is just as much your duty to buy your winter supply of coal AT ONCE as it to subscribe to the Red Cross and Liberty Loans.

You should protect yourself at home against a fuel shortage this fall and winter; while at the same time you are serving our boys who are doing the fighting by releasing cars and transports for their use during the summer and winter.

IT IS IMPORTANT THAT YOU GIVE THIS YOUR IMMEDIATE AT-TENTION.

Farmers cannot afford to delay getting their coal NOW, as it is as necessary as producing crops. Do not overlook an opportunity to haul a load of coal whenever you have a wagon in town.

If everyone pulls together, starts early and put their supply in now, it will avoid shortage, congestion and suffering, and will, no doubt, eliminate "Heatless Days" next winter.

The Government has designated June 3rd to 7th as the time in which to from the way her ayes dropped to her plate whenever he looked toward her order your coal. Do not overlook this.

If you are not going to order coal please be patriotic and go to work on chopping and saving wood.

C. E. Crawford, who is interested in Eastern Kentucky Oil Fields, la in the city in the promoting of the "Bourbon Oil and Development Co." of Paris, Ky., a company that already owns many producing weils.

Dr. Elmer Northcutt, says the Oil World, twenty years ago, with the crude instruments of time, set out to prove his beliaf that there was oil in Kentucky. Against the pes-simistic outlook ha fought. And found oil-lots of it.

Today, with the oil industry flourishing in Eastern Kentucky, he sees a still more optimistic outlook.

"Development in Kentucky is only beginning, Dr. Northeutt declared recently. "The best wells have not been drilled. The largest pools are still untouched."

Dr. Northcutt says that the oil men of the present in this State cannot realize the difficulties which faced ard troubles now and many of them but the future, he says, is bright, and things are shaping themselves in favor of the industry.

"The oil waits now are necessarily being drifled near railroads, near boarding houses, and where big leases can be obtained. Bad roads have great educators and politicians of her hurt the operators as they work their way in the new-found fields. It is elusive. hard to get easings for drilling, curbing for wells and machinery, but the vast resources, with her thousands of oli men are plugging against the difficulties as we battled with the greater obstacles when there were greater hardships and the outcome stocked with the finest horses, cattle was not so sure

There is a cheery outlook in the with her vast timber resources, with other direction," he said. "Now vir- her almost inexhaustible beds of coal, tually any development in the State her building stone, her asphalt, her of Kentucky is valuable. A lucky lead, zinc, baraties, calcites, fields strike, either of oil or gas, counts for of flour spar, with at least thirty Gasoline plants are now being built in Menifee county, and soon oil and gas-bearing atructures when will be built in other fields of Ken-touched in the right spot will send tucky. Dr. Northcutt is not a believer in Dr. Northcutt is not a believer in plur and other impurities, with the luck in the oil business. The lucky best Governor and Legislature in the strike idea is aif wrong, he says. World, why should any one hesitate "The Kentucky field was not run to cast their lot with our fair State, into by accident to make men rich clusive as she has been, and wee by a turn of fate."

The finding of oil in this State was brought about by cold study. Geological survey showed where lines the facilities to handle them. Roads and structures were located. This of every kind are being constructed is his explanation of the exploration as fast as labor will permit. Pipe rcheutt's story of the beginning of Kentucky gives an Insight into the troubles met by the pathfinders as they drifted in fields unknown to the oil world.

"Londed in pushboats, his machinery was pushed by poles seventy Columbia needs our resources. We miles up the Sandy river to the point chosen for the first oil development in that part of Kentucky. The first well was a 'Rusher" and flowed over the tap of the derrick. The first production was put on the market and "A few years later I left Valley View and begun development in the in M. M. degree to be conferred by Mr. Dimmick and I were both believers in geology. We Tenn. All members urged to be presdid our own drawing, located our own inca and structures. The discoveries of the early oil field in Kentucky did not occur by any accident. but by careful study and hard work.

"As usual in pioneering, the expense of ohtaining the market for the oil, lack of pipe lines and ac cossibility to refineries, etc., made It a losing proposition to the pioneer operators at that time. Spending of enough money to build the line for running of oil was objected to.

'A few years inter, with the largest steel tanks at that time in the world full of oil, I found myself practically 'broke.' There was no market, n pipe lines. It could not be sold.

"In what is now the Menifee gas field, the first well drilled at that time met a problem, in that it was utterly impossible to obtain a market for gas or oil. There was absolutely market. Today, from this field, gas is being produced which for gas is being produced which for welve years has supplied Lexington, Winchester and Mt. Sterling.

"It required large sums of money to build the Cumberisnd Pipe Line, which now takes oil from the field. his was done after the pioneer had oved there was oil in abundance

MISS MARIE MCADOO

HARPISTE

Miss McAdoo is often asked how abe happened to study the harp. When quite a small child sho heard a harpist, and his playing, and his beautiful TABLE FOR TIMELINESS. ica's part in the war, in a way that is golden harp made such a deep limpression on her that from that day it was her ambition to study the instrument and have one of her own. There are very few harp teachers, and these are only located in the larger cities, so at an early aga she began the study of the piano, and continued it until old caough to enter the Oberlin Conservatory, where she received her first harp lustruction under William Kilof the Puris Conservatory. Later she was coached under Loretta DeLous, who for ets years was harpist of the Bianeapolis Sympliony Orchestra, and still later she studied with Enrico Tramonti, first harpist of the Chicago Bymphony. She has been associated with Mme, itingsdorf for several seasons and will play some solos composed especially for the harp and also re-arrangements of songs and music well known on other instruments.

BIG DRAINAGE PROJECT.

Paducah, Ky., June 6 .- The Fiscal Court of Marshall county in session at Benton ,Ky., has made an order for the drainage of a tract of land, containing 7,000 acres and work will be started immediately. Tha land is in the Cypress swamps districts, near Gilbertsville, and is one of the richest tracts in Western Kentucky. The land owners decided to have the work done under the new Irainage act, instead of the law of 1912. The court ordered the district into the handa of the Board of Drainage Commissioners. The improvement will cost several thousand dollars and will be borne by the land owners. All this land lies along the Tennessee river and whan properly drained and put in a state of cuitivation will add vastly to the wealth of Marshail county.
